The success of any animal husbandry project depends on the animals staying healthy. A sickly pig is not going to benefit the woman who raises it. The Kenyan organization, Megabridge Foundation knows this well. They listed some of the reasons why they wanted to build a better, raised-platform shelter for their pigs:

1. It is easier to clean the raised houses, helping to separate droppings to be used for farm fertilizer, and reducing stench;

2. It is easy to maintain the structure;

3. The house is always dry, keeping the animals dry, helping to prevent contamination and infections.

Community members and men whose families will benefit from the program volunteered their time and talent to complete the construction project. The eight sows and two boars are settled in the new shelter. When piglets are born, Megabridge will give one to each family that has agreed to participate in the program. The women will care for the animals and then return two piglets to Megabridge, who will give those piglets to two more women on the waiting list. In this way the benefit will continue to ripple out, benefiting more women and their families!

Women are now attending trainings to learn best practices for caring for the pigs. Mercy, the Project Coordinator at Megabridge sends me regular updates and is happy to report, “The grant has made a tremendous contribution to Kiangungi village. People are flocking to learn about this project, which is destined to make a huge contribution towards economic empowerment of the poor.”
Wisdom from Del Anderson: I of myself can do nothing

I certainly wouldn’t have desired to break my hip, but now six months later, I’m certain that I’ve learned a lot that I wouldn’t have learned otherwise. I think it’s a little easier now to understand that “I of myself can do nothing.” I couldn't take the next breath without the Spirit there to keep me going.

This experience has pointed me in the direction of growth. I am not the Del I was yesterday. My focus is to come forth as a new person each day and realize that I am an expression of God and that I'm here to let God be God in me, through me, and as me. I can't eat yesterday's stale manna. Yesterday's manna is not good enough for today. It's an ever-changing world.

As we accept each challenge, each change and seek God's guidance, we open ourselves to receive the Allness of the God consciousness, expressing and coming forth through us.

Meditation, contemplative meditation and prayer are three of God's greatest tools. The major thing is to let go, be still, listen, and focus. Let my meditation be to know that my purpose is to keep expanding my consciousness and to let God take over entirely.

“God, each day give me a focused desire that wills to will to do your will.” God's Kingdom is within us. We need to let it come forth, step by step here on earth even at our most challenging times.

Life is not easy. It's a challenge. Life is not a destination. It's a process.

-Del Anderson, 2005

Kenya & Malawi, May 2017!

Plans are underway for a trip to Kenya and Malawi next summer! My last visit was in 2014 and it’s time again to meet with our partners and Small Business Fund (SBF) groups, encourage them, and verify that grant projects are happening as reported.

This trip will include a Small Business Fund training session for new and potential coordinators. This additional training time will help introduce new SBF volunteers to Sharing the Gift, the SIA culture of encouragement and empowerment, and allow them to meet and exchange information with current SBF coordinators. The SBF programs thrives when we have dedicated and informed leaders and this training is laying groundwork for future success and mindful expansion.

I will visit five different project areas and I look forward to many cups of tea and regional song and dance. As I plan and coordinate this visit I have started praying for: Willingness - Patience - Transformation. I am beyond willing to make the journey. I will be patient with buses and travel on dirt roads. I expect we will be transformed through connection and fellowship.

I welcome your prayers and your contributions to make this trip go smoothly. Asante sana (Thank you very much in Swahili.)

Welcoming Barbara Deal to the SIA Board!

Where do you live? In the Northernmost California Redwoods.

What was your profession? I worked for various church and parachurch organizations in pastoral, counseling, youth, and music ministries before serving as Coordinator, with husband Bob, of CFO International for 15 years. Following that, I started a literary agency, specializing in Body-Mind-Spirit genres.

What do you like about SIA? It thrills me that SIA works in partnership with people, trusting their abilities, gifts, and knowledge of local needs. Providing start-up funds and training to start businesses gives people the tools they need to become food secure, improve their housing, and pay their children's school fees.

What excites you most about SIA? The ripple effect can lift whole families from poverty to security, and spread to villages and communities. One of the great strengths of SIA's process is that people share what they learn and help others start their own small businesses.

Small Businesses in Nairobi - Transforming Fear to Hope

Wambui Nguyo sent this dispatch from the informal settlement of Korogocho in Nairobi, Kenya, where the SIA Small Business Fund is thriving and transforming lives.

Spirit in Action teaches people the skills they need to run successful and profitable businesses such as record keeping and reinvesting profits into their businesses. Some of the group members are illiterate, and they have children who can read and write for them. I encourage them to write down everything they buy or sell on a daily basis. The first expense for each group is a notebook. With this cooperation, the groups are carrying on well.

So far there are 33 groups in Korogocho! One could say that this is just a drop in the ocean, but on the contrary, this is quite something for us. So many families have lost fear and shame. They can raise their heads high because they are able to afford at least two meals in a day and even take their children to school. The groups also meet together, providing an avenue for them to pray, share advice, and support one another. With a reliable income, most group leaders are free from the worry of meeting their families' most basic needs.

Life in the informal settlement is different from life in the countryside. Here, people live in rented houses and share small rooms with the whole family. Due to large amounts of waste generated and left haphazardly, there are environmental risks associated with rearing animals. Therefore, none of the groups keep livestock or farm. This has made us think of a different way of Sharing the Gift. We have met with all 33 groups and they have agreed to each give some cash to support one or two more groups to start a business.

Top Left: One of the Small Business Fund leaders in Uganda. Many of the female business leaders are widows as a result of the many years of war there.

Above: SIA Small Business Fund Coordinator Naomi Ayot conducts a training with leaders from five new small business groups in Uganda. Record-keeping and reinvestment are important parts of the training sessions.

Bottom Left: A local woman trains a group of women in Uganda to produce, use, and sell these highly efficient fuel briquettes. These women are already earning more income by selling the briquettes that they don’t use themselves.
This seminar was different. Boys and girls sat in the classroom, listening to the presentations about puberty, reproductive health, and HIV/AIDS together. Spirit in Action grants have supported girls' empowerment seminars and an alternative rite of passage in the past. However, this seminar was the first to include high schoolers of both genders.

The co-ed seminar came at the request of the parents and the youth in Meru, Kenya. The girls felt strongly that the boys also needed to learn about sexuality and the fight against genital cutting. “The participants were happy and said they are going to be change agents in the community to fight against female circumcision,” reported one of the facilitators.

Eighty participants (35 boys and 45 girls) attended the week-long seminar held during the August school holidays. The facilitators were local women, who are experienced in health education. In addition to covering the health problems and danger of female circumcision, the sessions also discussed the effects of texting and social media, career and talent development, and drug and substance abuse. There was time for focus group discussion and questions from the youth. “It was a learning experience, and since it was the first of its kind, we had to consult a lot,” said Margaret Ikiara, Director of the grassroots organization CIFORD Kenya.

Many parents expressed gratitude for the workshops because the facilitators were able to effectively discuss these difficult topics with their children. Kambura, a mother of one of the girls said, “My daughter is very happy. She has learned a lot that she will share with her friends at school.”

Each participant left with a shirt that says, “The future depends on us. We are the change.” Together they will bring the message to friends and family, and be visible in the community as standing up for girls’ rights.

The participants had a great suggestion for future seminars: How about including a talent contest? Let’s make this fun, in addition to informative and empowering!
Thank you to our generous supporters!

We gratefully acknowledge those who have contributed to SIA from April 5 to October 10, 2016.

The Manyamula Cooperative has a new home!

The Manyamula Saving and Loans COMSIP Cooperative which started in 2010 with 41 members is thriving and transforming life in the rural village! After a year of hard work, issues with contractors, and many volunteer hours from members, the cooperative’s training centre and meeting hall compound is complete (pictured right)!

They are moved into the new office (pictured left) and have already begun renting out the meeting hall to other groups, bringing in money for the loan fund and to sustain their ongoing operations. Thank you for your support which has made this building possible. I look forward to seeing it for myself next May!

SIA Friends Reflect on Del’s Vision

“We continue to appreciate the vision of SIA: creating a body-mind-spirit difference in the total well-being of individual as each experiences a greater strength within oneself, in relationships, in community, in global connections.

Spirit in Action continues to live out the dream of our founder Del Anderson: to offer encouragement and support to others as each co-creates with God in daily life, being role models. In Del’s words, “we transform God’s dream for us into a working, living reality.” — Anonymous supporter

“\textit{I am sure that} Del \textit{in heaven is rejoicing over how his vision for Spirit in Action is being fulfilled}. Glenn Clark in Fishers of Men stressed how ministries focused on individuals was the Jesus way. Save one man or woman in body, mind and spirit, and that person will do the same, and growth happens in geometric progression. That's what you have been doing with comprehensive support of people's material and spiritual wholeness.”

— George Furniss, SIA supporter; he met Del in 1949 when he joined Del's Boy Scout Troop
